Instructs to Authors

The main emphasis of the journal is on original research. However, case studies, reviews of research, scholarly case studies, and commentary on salient issues are also considered for publication. The JPP Web site includes a special section on guidelines for authors. Manuscripts include book reviews in addition to general articles. Manuscripts are solicited from professionals who serve children and families.

Manuscript preparation: Manuscripts should not exceed 20 pages. The authors should include a statement indicating that the article is new and has not been published previously. A statement transferring copyright to the journal should be added after the relevant agency or grant information. Authors should not exceed 40 references.
