Contents
The main emphasis of the journal is on original research articles, scholarly case studies, and commentaries in psychology and other disciplines sensitive to the individual who has a disease or disability. The Editors endorse the concept of ‘people first’, not their disability. Terminology should reflect ‘persons with a disability’ (e.g. children with autism, persons with cancer) rather than the condition as an adjective (e.g. diabetic children, cancer patients). Nonsexist language should be used.

Specific manuscript guidelines: Please consult the Web site for important information concerning JPP submission guidelines, including abstract limitations, standards for statistical reporting, and compliance with the Americans with Disabilities Act (ADA). Authors are encouraged to register and log in to the journal's Manuscript Tracking System. To log in, visit the JPP Web site (http://www.jpepsy.oxfordjournals.org). The journal makes no page charges. Reprints may be ordered when page proofs are sent to authors. A printed copy of the journal will be sent to each author as a courtesy. For more information, see "Instructions to Authors" and "Reprints" sections.
